Paris, September 3. N. S. On the firſt of this Month, at eight a Clock in the Morning, died at Verſailles King Lewis XIV. Yeſterday between eight and nine in the Morning the Duke of Orleans came into this City to the Parliament, attended by the Guards in the ſame manner as when the King comes to Parliament, the Duke of Guiſe with an Half-Pike in his Hand, being at the Head of the Regiment of French Guards, of which he is Colonel. The Duke of Orleans made a Speech to the Parliament, in Expreſſions of high Eſteem and Regard for them and their Authority, and demanded the Regency without Limitation or Reſtriction, as of Right belonging to him by Proximity of Blood, and by the Uſage and Laws of the Kingdom, without allowing any Diſpoſition to the contrary which might be made by the Will or Codicil
